DIFFICULTY
Easy

A simplified version of the classic Japanese miso ramen, originally inspired by Just One Cookbook. This kid-friendly recipe uses ground pork for speed and builds a rich miso-sesame broth in under 30 minutes. The broth freezes well — make a double batch and stash the extra for busy weeknights.

Broth

The flavor base for the soup

Sesame oil	2 tbsp
Garlic, minced	2 tbsp
Ginger, minced	1 tsp
Shallot, chopped	2
Ground pork	½ lb
Doubanjiang (chili bean paste)	2 tsp
Miso paste	6 tbsp
Sugar	2 tbsp
Toasted sesame seeds	2 tbsp
Sake or mirin	2 tbsp
Salt	2 tsp
Chicken stock	8 cups

Doubanjiang is optional — buy non-spicy if you prefer mild. Ground chicken or mushrooms can sub for pork.

Noodles & Toppings

Cook separately, assemble when plating

Fresh ramen noodles	4 servings
Corn kernels	1 cup
Bean sprouts	2 cups
Nori, cut into squares	1 sheet
Scallions, chopped	1
White pepper powder	optional
Pork belly, sliced	optional
Pickled red ginger	optional

Directions

MAKE THE BROTH

- 1 Heat a stock pot over medium heat. Add sesame oil, then garlic, ginger, and shallot. Sauté until fragrant.
- 2 Add ground pork. Cook 4–5 minutes, breaking it apart, until no longer pink.
- 3 Add doubanjiang, miso paste, sugar, and sesame seeds. Mix well with the meat for 2 minutes — don't let it burn.
- 4 Pour in chicken stock and add salt. Taste and adjust seasoning. Boil over medium heat for 5 minutes.

NOODLES & ASSEMBLY

- 1 Cook ramen noodles according to package directions. Drain and divide among bowls.
- 2 Add bean sprouts and corn to the broth during the last minute of simmering, or keep them raw and pour hot broth over them when plating.
- 3 Ladle broth and pork over the noodles. Top with nori squares, scallions, pickled ginger, pork belly slices, and a sprinkle of white pepper.

Tips & Variations

- Make the broth ahead and freeze in portions — reheat and cook fresh noodles when ready to serve.
- For a richer bowl, soft-boil eggs (6.5 min) and marinate in soy sauce + mirin overnight.
- Adjust the miso-to-stock ratio to taste — start with 5 tbsp miso if you prefer a lighter broth.
